FIFTEEN NARROWLY ESCAPED IN WRECK

Wreck Results in Merely Shaking up the Passengers and No Lives Are Lost.

Racine, Wis., Jan. 10.—At a wreck at Corlies this morning 15 passengers narrowly escaped being killed. A milk train going from Delavan to Chicago on the St. Paul road struck a broken rail at the end of the switchyard and ran on the ties for about 50 feet, turned and crashed into a boxcar smashing the side of the coach, glass and splinters flying in all directions.
The passengers were thrown from their seats to the floor and some received bruises and cuts. The road was tied up for about two hours on account of the accident.

LIGHT SENTENCE IS GIVEN A PRISONER

Man Accused of Stealing Typewriter Fined by the Court.

Otto Schumann, charged with selling a rented typewriter, appeared in municipal court this morning, charged his plea of "not guilty" to "quality," and was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs, amounting in all to $30, and spend three months in jail. Had it not been for extenuating circumstances he would have been sent to the penitentiary.
Schumann, who is a former unemployed accident, was arrested on Dec. 13, for selling a typewriter for $15 which he rented from Koebelin's music store. Upon his plea of not guilty, he went to jail, in default of $500 bonds. While there, he deviated far from the truth in some of his statements regarding money which he received from his father, which according to the sheriff amounted to about $250. His parents, it appears, have been aiding him far beyond his needs and have but $150 left to last them through the winter.
In view of these facts, and in order that he might show his gratitude to them and also take care of his wife and child, a light sentence was imposed on condition that the question be settled to the satisfaction of the owners.

Five Year Old Boy Travelling alone From Brooklyn to California Gray Lawrence

Chicago.—Gray Lawrence 5 years old, who some time ago was sent from his home to a charitable institution in Brooklyn, passed through Chicago recently alone to join his father in their new home in Los Angeles.

Two years ago Gray Lawrence became the victim of poverty and was sent to the Eastern home thousands of miles from his father and sister Laura. The glad news of his father's good fortune came in the way of a Christmas present.

George T. Pearce of 159 East Chicago avenue who has adopted the little traveler's half-sister, Laura King, 11 years old, purchased the ticket and made arrangements with the conductor to see that all of the little fellow's wants would be supplied on the long trip. The child arrived Sunday tagged to Mrs. Pearce from the Brooklyn Children's Aid home.

Guorden Lawrence, the father, who is an electrician, has until recently been in reduced circumstances, but having obtained a good position in Los Angeles, he desired to have his son with him. Mr. Pearce notified the home and the authorities there agreed to send the boy as far as this city.

Mr. Pearce with the little fellow in tow, yesterday visited several of the downtown stores, where he purchased a complete new outfit of clothing for the youngster. Everybody seemed to take a great deal of interest in the brave little chap, and when he departed his tiny pocket was full of jingling coins.

Warriner, convicted local treasurer of the Big Four Railroad, in whose accounts there was a shortage of $613,000, is scheduled to be the star witness. Warriner, who already has been sentenced to six years imprisonment for the embezzlement, has charged that Mrs. Stewart-Ford received much of the money he stole from the railroad. The woman, on the other hand, declares that she can disprove the charges made against her and hints at startling revelations involving persons prominent in the business and social life of this city.

Portland, Ore., Jan. 10.—The first trial in the so-called Oregon land fraud cases is expected to begin in the federal court here within the next few days. BOSTON TO HOLD ELECTION UNDER NOVEL CHARTER

NEW SYSTEM SOMEWHAT RESEMBLES COMMISSION PLAN

CAMPAIGN WAS EXCITING

Officers To Be Elected Are Mayor, Nine Councilmen at Large and School Commissioners.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 10.—Boston's whirlwind municipal campaign, which has been one of the bitterest in the history of the city, ended today. Tomorrow the voters will elect a mayor, nine councilmen and school commissioners. The election has attracted national attention as it is the first to be held under the new city charter adopted by the vote of the citizens of Boston last November.

Under the new charter the board of aldermen is abolished and the council is reduced to nine members all of whom are to be elected at large. The mayor is to be elected for a term of four years instead of two as heretofore, and is subject to recall after two years by not less than a majority of all the voters of the city. Candidates for mayor, councilmen and school committee are nominated by petition and all party designations are eliminated from the official ballot. Another interesting provision of the new charter is that all department heads appointed by the mayor are subject to certification by the civil service commission, instead of being compelled to secure confirmation by the council, as has been the case in the past.

There are four candidates in the contest for mayor. The fight is really between James J. Storrow, a Democrat, and member of the banking house of Lee, Higginson & Co., and John F. Fitzgerald, former Democratic mayor, although George A. Hibbard, the present Republican mayor, and Nathaniel Taylor, a Democrat and an editorial writer on the Boston Globe each feels that he will win.

Mr. Storrow describes the campaign as "a moral issue" and the "Moral Issue" as Mr. Fitzgerald, and Mr. Fitzgerald speaks of Mr. Storrow's methods as "an effort to debauch the Boston electorate such as has never been seen in the history of the city."

Mr. Storrow promises that if he is elected Boston shall have a better administration than ever before in the history of the city. He will see, he says, that all the city money is spent honestly, that grafting contractors do not get a chance to divide with dishonest city officials and that all city departments shall be conducted without regard to political affiliations. He is going to check the increase of the city debt, he says, and he positively declares that the only interest he has in to advance the welfare of Boston. At the same time he wants it distinctly understood that he is not a reformer.

Mr. Fitzgerald, in his numerous speeches, has advocated a "bigger, busier and better Boston." He has promised to work for new subways, for new industries, for a trunk line between Boston and Buffalo and to do everything he can to make employment for the working people of the city. He has talked strenuously in favor of Canadian reciprocity and advocates making Boston a free port.

OBSERVE CENTENARY OF FAMOUS JURIST

Jeremiah S. Black, Attorney General Under Buchanan, A Noted Lawyer.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 10.—One hundred years ago today, in Somerset county, this State, was born Jeremiah S. Black, one of the most noted members of the American bar and a prominent figure in the stirring events preceding the outbreak of the civil war. At Attorney General in President Buchanan's cabinet, Judge Black was an ardent supporter of the Union. When Abraham Lincoln became President, Judge Black retired from public life. He returned to the practice of law at his home near York, and in the last twenty years of his life earned one of the greatest reputations in the history of the American bar.

SESSION PROMISES TO BE VERY SHORT

Nothing Of Great Importance, Except Prohibition, Will Come Before South Carolina Legislature.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 10.—Members of the South Carolina legislature are gathering in the city in anticipation of the opening of the session tomorrow. With no important contests in sight, it is expected the session will complete its work within thirty days. Liquor legislation, with the possibility of a renewal of the fight for Statewide prohibition, promises the only debate of wide public interest. In addition there will be the usual array of measures relating to taxation, insurance, good roads and education.

TIM COLLINS A VICTIM OF GAS

FOUND DEAD IN BEDROOM OVER-LOOKING CORN EXCHANGE.

MISSING SINCE FRIDAY

Appearances Seemed to Indicate That Tragedy Was Accidental But There Were Peculiar Circumstances.

Timothy Collins, age about forty-five years and variously employed in his lifetime as a digger for the New Gas Light company and various plumbing establishments, was found dead in the third story of the Williams block, 114 Corn Exchange square, sometime Friday evening. The discovery was made by E. J. Clark, who rooms next door and Frank J. Kane, proprietor of the saloon on the ground floor and collector of the rent, at half past twelve o'clock Sunday afternoon. Mr. Kane wished to see Collins on some matter of business and encountered Clark on the stairway. When the door was found to be locked, Clark climbed up and looked through the transom. What he saw aroused apprehensions that all was not well with his neighbor and he opened the light portal, made his way through the aperture, let himself down into the room, and unlocked the door.

The place reeked with the fumes of illuminating gas that were escaping both from a chandelier jet in the bedroom and a wide-open burner of a small cook stove located in an alcove on the north side of the apartment. Collins, fully dressed but cold in death, was lying upon a bed in the southeast corner of the room. After the windows had been opened and the officers summoned, Dr. G. C. Waule was called to the scene and made an examination. He found that life had been extinct for many hours.

Preparations for a meal. Appearances, in the main, indicated accidental death rather than suicide, though the circumstances were not absolutely convincing. A stoppan on the stove in the alcove contained a large piece of fresh meat solidly embedded in ice and unwrapped parcels containing onions, a fresh load of bread, jelly, butter, and other comforts, scattered about the place, seemed to show that preparations for a meal had been either abandoned or interrupted in some unforeseen manner. A half-smoked flash of whiskey on a table near the bed offered itself as subtle evidence that the dead man might not have been wholly master of himself when he lay down for a nap which was to have no awakening in this world.

Intoxicated When Last Seen. Indeed, according to the testimony of friends, he was under the influence of liquor when last seen Friday afternoon. It is said that Nell Robinson, who lives on the river road, and Mr. Kane helped him to his room and that Mr. Robinson, after returning from a trip downstairs to half fill the stoppan with water, left the place. E. J. Clark saw Robinson leave the room with the stoppan and directed him to the water faucet but was not in the hallway when he returned. The man looked as if it had just come from the market and aside from the position of the stoppan, there was nothing to indicate that any blame had been lighted under it. A question naturally arises as to whose carelessness, if carelessness it was, resulted in the burning and gas jet being left open, and an investigation will doubtless be made.

Pressure Not Taken Off. In some quarters a theory was advanced to the effect that the pressure might have been temporarily taken off at the gas plant but this notion was quickly set at rest by assurances given at the plant that no such thing had happened or was likely to happen. There were also rumors to the effect that Collins had been advised by a physician that he must undergo a serious operation and had been greatly harassed and worried by the dread of this ordeal. This report could not be verified. A brother who resides in Beloit, when apprised of the circumstances, was absolutely certain that the unfortunate man could not have deliberately ended his life.

Paid Rent in Advance.

Collins, on Friday, paid his room rent for two months in advance and the sum of seventy-five cents in money was found upon his person. Nothing resembling a farewell note could be found. The deceased was unmarried, well-known, and well liked by all who enjoyed his acquaintanceship.

D. F. KEITH.

New York.—The dramatic rise of D. F. Keith in the amusement business is one of the marvels of this age of organization of theatrical enterprises. With F. F. Proctor he formed the Keith & Proctor Amusement company in 1906 and since then has secured control of a number of leading vaudeville houses all over the country. He was born at Hillsboro Bridge, N. H., and was educated in the district schools. He was proprietor of a circus until 1885 when he bought the Gaiety theater at Boston and began to give continuous performances. The idea made him rich, his predominant characteristic is a disinclination to talk when he has nothing of importance to say. He is said to be a master of detail and owes his success largely to his ability as an organizer.

Taken all in all, save in the matter of attendance, due to the inclement weather, the show has been a great success—a credit both to Janesville and the Association. A number of sales were made during the course of the week, and the show, at least to the breeders, was very successful from the standpoint of sales and prizes.

Those who failed to attend cannot appreciate the worth of the exhibition, but several cuts of the coops, including a pen and ink sketch of some of the exhibits, will prove instructive.

TOM CHIVINGTON

NEW PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF BASEBALL.

Thomas M. Chivington.

BY OSCAR H. MORRIS.

Born in Nebraska. Was country corner. Worked on railroad. Was sporting editor. Was race track judge. Was secretary of ball team. Was general manager of 1909 A. A. pennant winners.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Thomas M. Chivington, the new president of the American Association of Baseball clubs, is a soldier of fortune in a degree. He has turned his hand to many things in the 45 years since he was born in a little town on the Nebraska prairie. He has been office boy, railway brakeman, deputy coroner in a city where a good man died with his boots on, starter and judge at running trotting races, newspaper man and baseball manager. And while he has not been noted for any special brilliancy of work at any of these lines, he has done well all that has ever fallen to him to do.

Tom Chivington is the son of a preacher and the grandson of a preacher. His father carried the gospel to the frontier towns of Nebraska and Colorado, where the grandfather had also filled the pulpit of many western settlements in the days when it is said the missionaries were a rifle in one hand and a bible in the other. In the capital of Denver hangs a life-sized portrait of Tom Chivington's grandfather—the preacher—who was also a soldier—the preacher—who was also a soldier—Col. Thomas Chivington, commander of the First Colorado cavalry in the Civil war. "Chivington's Lancers" the men of the First Colorado were called. They were recruited from the mining camps, from the gambling rooms, from the hundreds of men who rushed to the Pike's peak region in the days of the early gold excitement in search of riches or riches, or to conceal a past.

These soldiers were as children in the hands of this fighting and praying soldier-preacher—this ancestor of the new president of the American association.

Born in Nebraska, Tom Chivington was educated in the country schools of the west. He began work as an office boy in Denver. Then he became a brakeman on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad. Then he doubled in newspaper work. Next he was deputy coroner of Arapahoe county, Colorado, in Denver. Then he went back into newspaper work.

In 1892 Chivington quit Colorado and went to Minneapolis, where he was employed by a railroad company, but he shifted soon and 1894 found him in Chicago in the sporting department of the old Herald. Soon after he quit newspaper work and was drafted into the horse racing game, being appointed associate judge of the Harlan track. He went back to newspaper work later on and 1903 found him in Milwaukee. As a sporting editor here he always was a booster for the American association.

In 1906 Tom went to Louisville to become sporting editor of the Herald. After nine months' work in that capacity he was named secretary and business manager of the Louisville ball club by George T. Hebert. The following year he was made general manager, where he remained until his election as president of the association.

The first year Chivington was with the ball club the team finished in fifth place, losing fourth position by one point in 1908 the team finished second and the past season the Colonels won the pennant.

Heroes. What a hero one can be without moving a finger! The world is not a field worthy of us, nor can we be satisfied with the plains of Troy. A glorious strife seems waging within us, yet so noblesse that we but just catch the sound of the clarion ringing of victory, borne to us on the breeze. There are in each the seeds of an heroic order, which need only to be stirred in with the soil where they lie, by an inspired voice or pen, to bear fruit of a divine flavor.—The room.

BEING A HERO.

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

Ebenezer Schermerhorn, a farmer's hired man, was in love with the Widow Tompkins, whose farm adjoined that of his boss on the west. Ebenezer was twenty-four years old, plain of face and ungainly of form and without $100 worth of property. The widow was less than forty and well off. Ebenezer was rated as good hearted, but rather dull. One evening as he dropped in to see the widow about borrowing some farm implements next day he found her reading a love story. She read a few chapters to him and afterward acknowledged that she had always been romantic and that if she ever married again it would be to a hero. The farmer's hired man didn't rush right off that night and try to be a hero, but sat down to think.

Three or four days after Ebenezer's thinking a tramp came along the road and, seeing the young man hoeing corn just over the fence, halted for a word or two. Ordinarily Ebenezer would have lapped the fence and run the wayfarer half a mile, but on this occasion he invited him over into the corn and sat down with him for a confidential conversation. The result of that conversation was that at 8 o'clock that evening the tramp appeared before the Widow Tompkins and made threats of what he would do if she didn't set out victuals, hunt up old clothes and come down with a dollar in cash. Ebenezer was not far away, just far enough to come running up and knock the tramp head over heels and rescue the widow. But as he started to come running he fell down and got tangled up with the bushes, and before he could get away the widow had broomsticked the tramp into flight. She didn't say she was glad that the would be hero was so near at hand. What she did say was that she wasn't afraid of any old tramp walking the roads.

Ebenezer's first try was a failure, but within a fortnight he was ready for another. Behind the farms ran a river. The widow had a skiff on the water and often rowed herself up and down. One night the farmer's hired man took some tools down to the landing and was busy for an hour. Two evenings later, just at sundown, he saw the widow making across the field for the river, and he was not long in following her. He expected to hear cries for help, but they did not come. He expected to find a woman clinging to a swamped boat, but he didn't. She was wading ashore when he arrived on the bank and dashed in, and all he got out of it was a good soaking and a cold in the head.

A cold in the head casts a man down for a few days, but if there be any hero about him he rallies and becomes more daring than ever. Ebenezer rallied. Two or three farmhouses in the township had been robbed, and this fact became the basis for his third plan. One night at midnight he left his bed, descended to earth by way of a window, and armed with a club, he became a guard for the widow's house. He circled around it and patrolled the garden and the orchard, and he felt that he would give a year of his life if a robber would appear. He would first tell him and then arouse the house and when the widow came to know that he had been guarding her for love her heart would melt toward him. But no robber came. Instead of that his footsteps awoke the widow, and, peering out, she saw some one walking about, and she got out a shotgun and raised a window and blazed away. The gun was loaded with bird shot to shoot hawks that might come swooping down on chickens, but in this case they answered just as well for a man. Ebenezer received about twenty of them and ran two miles to a doctor to have them picked out. He also had a vacation from work for a week under the excuse that he had sprained his back turning over in bed.

Ninety-nine out of a hundred would be heroes would have given up the job right here, but Ebenezer was a man to hang on. It was while he was limping around on his vacation and doing a lot of standing up and wandering over the fields that he came upon the widow fishing in the river at a certain point. He did not show himself, but fifty feet from where she sat under a tree he discovered a bumblebee's nest in the grass. It was a large and liberal nest, and it gave him a thought. The bees wouldn't bother anybody so long as they were let alone. If stirred up they would look for meat. There was a haystack not far away, and Ebenezer had matches in his pocket. He retired behind the stack and collected a handful of stones from the plowed land. Then he threw one by one at the spot where the bees were pursuing the even tenor of their ways. The plot thickened. You can think a bumblebee plot in a very short time. All you've got to do is to tread on their contrails. When the insects found the rocks dropping on their heads they swarmed out of the grass to look for the enemy. They should have seen the widow and descended upon her, and at her first shriek Ebenezer would have come charging down with a wisp of lighted hay in either hand. But things went wrong. The bees then went for him alone. They ran him up and down the haystack, they ran him over fences and back, they ran him across lots and in circles, and when they finally left him and he fell down the widow came forward and asked:

"But why were you such a fool?"

"He-because I want you to marry me," he groaned in reply.

"Good lands! Why, I have been engaged to the sewing machine man for the last six months!"

Rich Mexican State.

The state of Jalisco has long been known as one of the richest in the republic of Mexico in agriculture and mining.

In an interview regarding the proposed law, Judge Sale says: "I am in favor of the adoption of the Commission form of government for this city because I believe the interests of the taxpayers of this city will be promoted thereby. Further I believe we will get better men by electing them from the city at large than by electing them from the wards. I also believe that men who give their entire time and attention to the city's affairs can give us better results than the same men when necessarily engaged in their own business, ninety-nine hundredths of their time."

I approve of the Commission plan of City Government because it enables one to determine the responsibility for each and every act of city government—because it gives a non-partisan administration—because of the opportunity of the officeholders to become thoroughly experienced in their line of work by many years' experience. I have carefully examined Mr. Burpee's objections as stated in the printed copy of his address to the Twilight Club, and I do not believe that any of his objections are so serious as to prevent the Commission plan of Government working successfully in the city of Janesville, under the present law, with such amendments as may be obtained from the legislature at its next session. It would be impossible to devise a law which would not require amendments after its practical workings had been demonstrated. And no law, however perfect, would escape the condemnation of some astute legal mind, seeking to discover objections to its legality and constitutionality. Of course there may be litigation to determine the operation of the law, but that is inevitable whenever there is a radical change made in city or state government.

The increasing imperative demand throughout the nation for trained responsible city officials with centralized power and authority renders it probable that within 20 years the Commission plan of Government will have proven itself so successful in giving an honest, economical and efficient administration of city affairs that no one can be found who will dare attack it except that class of mercenary politicians who are even opposed to the Australian ballot box.

BETTER THAN "THE RECALL"

The Wisconsin Law has two features, which are far superior to the recall, and which will accomplish everything that the recall will, and more.

1st. Every ordinance must be published in full ten days before it goes into effect (except in case of riot or when the city's welfare is in immediate danger,) and if 25 per cent of the people sign a petition protesting against the ordinance, the commissioners must reconsider it. If they still wish to put the ordinance through, it must be submitted to a vote of the people.

This feature gives the people a chance to pass judgment on every ordinance of the commissioners before it becomes a law. It is equal to a Referendum.

Gov. Folk of Missouri said: "Government by the people is best where it is near the people. No bill that cannot stand the light of publicity should become a law."

The Commission law offers a further strong check on wrongdoing by commissioners, in that it provides for full publicity on all business transacted. At the end of each and every month a statement of every expenditure and of all the business done for the past month must be published in the newspapers, and every vote on each measure must be recorded.

2nd. We have the statutory laws for malfeasance in office. "Malfeasance" is defined as a "wrong or injurious act." If an officer is corrupt he is not only removed from office, but the law will punish him as he deserves.

The absence of the recall makes it impossible for disgruntled opposition or self-seeking "special interests" to embarrass and disturb the administration of city affairs by instituting charges of unstable nature against a commissioner. Any just charges of corruption or wrongdoing will be prosecuted under the statutory law for malfeasance in office.

At any time a group of citizens can demand a proper enforcement of existing ordinances. A commissioner can be removed for failure to enforce these ordinances according to the provision for malfeasance in office.

For the past five, ten, or even fifteen or twenty years the people have complained against the present system of government. They have elected good men, but even good men are powerless under the present system.

Tomorrow the people will have a chance to vote for the Commission form of government, a plan that has proved successful in forty other cities, both large and small, and that has one hundred cities preparing to take it up.

MR. VOTER, CONSIDER THESE TWO FACTS:

1st.—We have been dissatisfied for more than a score of years with our present form of government.

2nd. Every city that has tried the Commission form endorses it heartily.

In view of twenty years of dissatisfaction, the city can well afford to give this new plan a trial.

I shall vote for the Commission form of Government.

GEO. S. WOODRUFF.

I believe that the Commission form of Government should be tried.

J. L. BOSTWICK.

I am in favor of anything that will better Janesville therefore I strongly support the plan for Commission form of Government.

CHAS. D. STEVENS.

W. T. PRATT.

I believe the Commission form of Government should be given a trial in our city.

I think the Government by Commission would be a good thing for the City of Janesville, as it is a more up-to-date and business like than the present form of government; from my view point Janesville has advanced but very little within the past twenty years. I have been absent from this city for over fourteen years and therefore can see it perhaps more than some others who have lived here continuously.

ALEXANDER E. MATHIESON.

I am in favor of the Commission Form of Government for Janesville because I believe that it would take the city government out of politics and give a square deal and the best results to all. While time might demonstrate that changes should be made in the present law, still I think that satisfactory results might be had under that law.

CHARLES H. LANGE.

Several years of the present form of government have failed to materially advance Janesville, either in population or prosperity. I favor Commission government for Janesville believing that it will fill some of the 100 or more vacant houses now in town and materially advance the business interests of the city.

JESSE EARLE.

I am in favor of Commission government for Janesville: first, because of its own virtues and its successful experience in other cities; second, because of the inefficiency of the present system whose defects are only too apparent and whose virtues more than two hundred years' trial has not disclosed.

THE SCRAP AT WASHINGTON

The president's special messages to congress, dealing with railroads and corporations, were comprehensive state papers of more than usual significance, but the topics discussed are relegated to the background for the present, because of the absorbing interest aroused by the summary removal of Chief Forester Pinchot and the democratic victory, which occurred in the house as the result of a factional fight in the republican ranks.

Public opinion will be divided concerning the removal of Pinchot. He is a man of wealth and refinement whose life has been devoted to the study of trees and plants. President Roosevelt found him that he was inclined to accept the appointment of chief forester.

He soon developed into more than a government employee, for compensation was of no consideration, and love for the work and zeal in carrying it out became of absorbing interest.

His work in the west brought him in contact with Secretary Hallinger, a member of President Taft's cabinet, in charge of the portfolio of the interior. Differences of opinion developed between these two officials as to the conservation of natural resources, and an open rupture resulted which is now the subject of congressional investigation.

The president attempted to conciliate both men, but failed, and Pinchot was removed for insubordination. Just how this will affect the investigation, as well as the president, remains to be seen.

Pinchot will be exploited by enemies of the administration as a friend of the people whose zeal in attempting to protect their interests was both warranted and commendable.

On the other hand the fact will be recognized by all far-sighted people, whose judgment is not warped by prejudice, that President Taft is the chief executive. Loyalty on the part of subordinates, of every class, is of first importance, and when this is violated either through willfulness, ignorance or indifference, embarrassment follows and results are disastrous.

Pinchot seems to be the victim of willful insubordination, and the last paragraph in the president's letter of removal is his defense for the action which was reluctantly taken after careful consideration by the cabinet. The paragraph follows:

"When the people of the United States elected me president they placed me in an office of the highest dignity, and charged me with the duty of maintaining that dignity and proper respect for the office on the part of my subordinates. Moreover, if I were to pass over this matter in silence, it would be most demoralizing to the discipline of the executive branch of the government.

"My own conduct you have destroyed your usefulness as a helpful subordinate of the government, and it therefore now becomes my duty to direct the secretary of agriculture to remove you from your office as the forester."

"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

This, briefly stated, is the Pinchot affair, so much discussed, and just now of absorbing interest. Could the president do less than he has done under the circumstances?

The scrap in the house of representatives resulted in a democratic victory pure and simple, and when the smoke clears away the people will so understand it.

The question of appointing a committee of six members to serve jointly with the senate committee on the Hallinger-Pinchot investigation was under discussion, when by a vote of 149 to 146, a resolution was adopted to elect this committee, rather than have the chairman appoint.

This is heralded over the country as a victory for the insurgents, but also up the vote and see how it looks: 123 democrats and 23 insurgent republicans voted for the resolution, and 146 republicans against it—simply a case of the tail wagging the dog. The democrats vote solidly against any administration measure, and in this case the insurgents hold the balance of power. If this policy is pursued throughout the session it will block all legislation and result in a new party alignment. If there is any glory in that kind of a victory the disgruntled statesmen are entitled to it.

WITH THE PRESIDENT

It is gratifying to know that in the first flush of excitement over the removal from office of Chief Forester Pinchot, the conservative press of the country is a unit in supporting the action of the president.

The Chicago Tribune yesterday published short editorials from representative papers in half a dozen states where Pinchot is known, and where he has been most active in prosecuting his work.

These expressions of opinion were wired to the Tribune in response to its request and they are significant, because they come from a section of the country most vitally interested in conservation of natural resources.

The Portland Oregonian says:

"We want things done in this country, and they who put up their plea for a fanciful 'conservation' should not be allowed to substitute their own notions for the general laws. Hallinger is the right man in the right place, and either he or Pinchot must go. Taft would not be president had Pinchot remained. This individual has what the people before they knew the fine term megamania, used to call the 'big head.' He is a theorist; he has courted a kick down the stairs that he might show his bruises. A week hence his name will know no mention."

The Denver Times says it never yet has seen so persistent and unscrupulous a plotter escape the pit he dug for others. Pinchot long had ceased to be forester and had become a professional political plot maker, subverting the name conservation to cover a conspiracy.

The Spokesman Review, independent republican, says:

"In dealing with the problem, President Taft occupied a position of exceeding delicacy and difficulty. Undoubtedly he retains confidence in Pinchot's ability, zeal, and patriotic devotion. He has publicly and emphatically expressed his confidence in the integrity of Hallinger, and a conviction that the secretary's conduct has been correct and able. In the removal of Pinchot, Taft had a painful task, but under the circumstances he could not well evade it."

"Salt Lake City, Jan. 8.—(Special.)—The news of Pinchot's dismissal was hailed with delight by the members of the National Wool Growers' association, now in convention in Ogden. President Fred W. Gooding said today:

"When the sun rose this morning it marked a new epoch in the history of the west, the passing out of Gifford Pinchot from the forest service. May the west get a square deal and may we be considered as being in existence."

"Little sympathy is felt for Pinchot by the leading men of the press of the state. The Salt Lake Tribune, independent republican and nonmormon, says:

"Mr. Pinchot certainly has placed himself in the line of discipline. If he is allowed thus to defy the executive authority and even the president himself, then, of course, discipline will be lost."

"The Deseret News, organ of the Mormon church, says:

"The conduct of Mr. Pinchot lends support to the supposition that he is proceeding in the Hallinger controversy not entirely from a desire to see truth vindicated or wrongs righted, but for the purpose of discrediting the administration and causing strife in the party."

The Albuquerque, New Mexico, Morning News says:

"While the drastic policy to which President Taft resorted in making peace in his official family may be regretted, we are forced to recognize the fact that it was inevitable, and the only ground of criticism is that he did not let the ax fall one way or the other long ago."

The Omaha Bee says:

"The president adopted the only course open to him and did what any other executive would do under similar circumstances with an insubordinate official, not only persistent in contumacy, but finally in open revolt. Mr. Pinchot no doubt is actuated by the highest motives and firmly believes in the rectitude of his conduct. Yet, it would have placed him in a much better position if he had the good taste to resign when he found he could not longer work with the president to achieve the ends both so ardently desired."

San Francisco Chronicle:

"In his letter to Senator Dolliver in the Hallinger controversy Forester Pinchot not only violated official propriety but a direct order of the president. He openly justifies insubordination in those subordinate to him and attacks the president himself. There was but one thing for the president to do, and that was to dismiss Pinchot, Price, and Shaw from the service."

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer says:

"The letter which Gifford Pinchot addressed to Senator Dolliver of Iowa not only constitutes an act of grave and inexcusable insubordination, but is an insupportable insult to the president of the United States. Pinchot ignored his immediate superior and traveled out of his way to join issue with the president with respect to the Alaska coal lands issue, and the relation which Gifford, discharged by the president, bore to that issue. His removal may be a nice days' wonder. It is a pity, for he is a conscientious, well intentioned person, but as much of a zealot as William Lloyd Garrison or old Ossawatimie Brown."

The people elected Mr. Taft president, and not Mr. Pinchot. The public will not allow any man to insult the president as Pinchot has done not even Gifford Pinchot. The confession of conspiracy against Mr. Hallinger by Pinchot's assistants and his contumacious and dishonorable and discreditable. Pinchot has shown that he has ceased to be a gentleman and deserved to be, as he has been, kicked out of the service of the people whose president he has insulted."

These expressions of opinion represent popular sentiment, and this fact will be well established as soon as the country is heard from. President Taft is still the president.

TO THE VOTERS

The voters of Janesville are to decide tomorrow whether the city shall continue to be governed by the old aldermanic method, which have so long prevailed, or whether it will adopt the concrete business plan of government by commission.

When the petitions were circulated, two months ago, calling for the submission of this plan to the people, they were signed by more than 700 voters, and double the number might have been secured had it been necessary.

These signatures represented all classes of voters, and included a majority of the attorneys in the city. There is no reason why public sentiment should not be as strongly in favor of the plan today as it was two months ago.

The action was not hastily taken as the law was freely discussed and much information published concerning the experience of other cities under commission rule.

The plan is the right plan and the Wisconsin law is a good law. It will be adopted tomorrow unless defeated through indifference, if every man who is dissatisfied with the present system of government, and believes that the taxpayers are entitled to more for their money, will go to the polls and vote "yes" on the proposition. It will carry by a good majority.

If the measure is lost the summary of the vote will show that the stay-at-home vote defeated it.

The arguments which have been advanced against the measure have no weight as compared to the benefits which will accrue to the city through a business administration, and this every thoughtful, unprejudiced voter knows.

Vote your convictions tomorrow. If troubled with doubt, give the city the benefit of the doubt, and you will never have occasion to regret that you had a part in the forward movement.

The taxes for this year are higher than they were last year notwithstanding the fact that last year's assessment was for 15 months rather than for 12. This was due to the change of date in collecting the taxes. While the commission form of government may not reduce the taxes it will produce a dollar in results for every dollar expended, and that means economy.

The city of Boston has adopted the commission form of government, and holds its first election tomorrow. A mayor and nine commissioners are to be elected to take the place of the council composed of 70 members. If the plan is good enough for Boston it ought to satisfy Janesville.

No man can afford to say, either by word or act, "I don't care," on any question of public interest. Every man should care for the welfare of the city which shelters him, and do all in his power to make it better.

No citizen worthy of the name by assuming the responsibilities of citizenship. The government of the city is what we, the voters, make it. We can make it better if we will by adopting the commission form of government. Don't fail to vote tomorrow.

Vote once tomorrow and persuade your indifferent neighbor to do the same. The opportunity to do something for Janesville is here. If lost, it may not come again.

The mugwump magazines will now have a spasm of hilarity because of the scrap in Washington, but the man who laughs last will have the most fun.

A COMMUNICATION

SAINT PRISCILLA'S TWILIGHT CHAT.

What is home without a mother? How many have asked that question, and yet realized all that is meant by it? Very few have ever thought or realized what a mother really is in the home. Children, especially, and some grown men and women, will never realize that mother ever gets tired.

If they are in a hurry or some task distracts them they will leave, and with an "Oh well, mother can do it," go off and leave a good time.

Does it ever occur to you young people that mother often puts these displeasing tasks before you to learn you a lesson so that when you are grown up and married you can take care of your own home? Or, if you have a servant, it does no harm to know all these things. When a mother leaves this home for a higher one, then is when you realize all that mother did and what a help she was in the family.

The same may be said of some men. Not all of them, however. It is true, some of them help shoulder a wife's burdens at home. A man will be frequently heard to exclaim: "Oh, well, she don't do much; she can sit down and read all day." There he is mistaken. When he has to do all of a wife's work he realizes that wife has a great deal more to do than to sit and read.

Some men come home at night cross and ugly and if a thing does not suit them they will say, "I wish I had stayed an old bachelor; what good times I had then. What good is a wife anyway? They don't amount to much."

True, some wives don't amount to "three burrheads" this side of Hall Columbia. But still, think a minute! What is dearer than a good wife, providing she is a good, common sense woman who knows how to boil water without burning it, and who does not make biscuits like bricks or pancakes like horse blankets?

Oh, fiddlesticks, who wants to be an old bachelor?

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

A SLANDER ON WOMAN.

Listen to this:

"The American woman will leave a three-month-old child to the tender mercies of an ignorant maid, and, dressed according to the dictates of this higher civilization, so she suffers every time she draws a long breath, she will ride around fondling a Pompadour pop."

Who wrote that?

Some English newspaper man?

Or is it a passage from the new book of some foreign tourist who spent two weeks in New York City and Boston "studying" the Americans?

Strange to say, the excerpt is from a New York newspaper.

Mind you, the writer does not say "some American women" nor "the women of the Four Hundred," leaving the inference that his characterization applies to the average American woman.

Which is a patent slander.

The average woman of this country does not neglect nor desert her child in order to parade with a pop.

On the contrary—

The average American wife and mother not only rears to have children of her own, but her devotion to her flesh and blood is limited only by her physical strength and heart power.

The American woman lavishes love on her offspring and stints and sacrifices herself for the sake of her little ones as much as any woman or any nation on the earth.

Of course we have freak women. And in many communities there are American women who, through mistaken devotion to public service or desire for society, somewhat neglect their children for attendance upon women's clubs or lodges or what not. But—

Think of it!

Does the description printed above fit your wife or mother or sister or daughter, Mr. Man? Or does the description fit the wife or mother or daughter or sister of any man in your immediate neighborhood?

The average American woman of the average community is the salt of the earth. No woman on this earth foot-stool makes a better mother.

Your mother and mine—God bless them!—need no vindication from the slander of a provincial and unparlous New York writer who does not know what he is talking about.

But it stirs one's righteous blood to read this reflection on the beautiful name of the American woman.

Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER

By WALT MASON (Copyright, 1909, by George Matthews Adams.)

"Things never seem to come my way, and so I'm sick and sorry. I asked a friend of mine, today, to sing me 'Annie Laurie'; for I was HARD tried and sick at heart, and LUCK feeling born and money, and so he pried his face apart, and sang me 'Annie Laurie.' 'Twixt all ways thus three childhood's hour, I always miss connections; for me the cream is always sour, and mostly the confessions, when I would gaily run my fan, her temper has a cross edge; the butter never knew a cow, there's whiskers on the sausage. Last night I couldn't sleep a wink, for thoughts of ghost and bogey; I said: 'I'll ride and get a drink, and smoke a cabbage stogie.' I tramped across the silent slacks to find the mealy duffer, and stepped upon a carpet sack—I wore no shoes or slippers, and then I fell over a chair, and nearly spewed a flight of stars, and landed in the gutter. The neighbors heard the frightful noise, and came swarming over, a hundred idiots and boys, including Old Dog Rover. 'Well, are you hurt?' the sillies cried; I made my angry snoulder; 'I die too slowly,' I replied, 'please hit me with a boulder.'"

Virtue in Troubles.

The only really miserable people are those who haven't any troubles.

Had a Kick Coming.

True Source of Wealth.

The improvement of the ground is the most natural obtaining of riches, for it is our great mother's blessing, the earth; but is slow, and yet where men of great wealth do stoop to husbandry it multiplies riches exceedingly.—Bacon.

HOW TO VOTE ON QUESTIONS.

To vote Yes, turn the Question Pointer to the word Yes, and leave it there. To vote No, turn the Question Pointer to the word No, and leave it there.

The question regarding the adoption of the Commission Form of Government will be submitted in the upper left-hand corner of the machine and the voter will simply indicate his preference with the pointer and pull the lever.

The Question

The question today, with the farmer and the dairyman, is not whether they shall use a Cream Separator.

The old gravity system has been superseded. The centrifugal cream separator is an economic necessity.

The question today is: What kind of Cream Separator?

The modern dairyman and farmer want the Cream Separator that fulfills three requirements to the highest degree:

Close Skimming, Easy Running, Long Life

There is only one separator that combines leadership in all three of these requirements. That is the United States Separator.

We don't ask anybody to take our unsupported word for this claim. We back our claim with iron-clad facts.

EXPENSIVE EXPERIENCE

The dairyman and farmer is often tempted to buy a cream separator because it is cheap. The mail order and catalogue houses reap a harvest every year from that temptation.

Does it pay to buy anything simply because it is cheap? Experience teaches that it does not. The United States Separator costs more than some others. But it does the work better than any other.

And it does it longer than any other. Isn't such a machine worth a little more than one which cannot be depended upon?

United States Separators which have been used continuously for seventeen years are reported to be in good condition, and doing good work twice every day.

Isn't that the kind of a machine to own? THE UNITED STATES SEPARATOR won highest award at the Seattle Exposition and the Pan-American Exposition, beside many other gold medals. It's the cheapest separator of any—quality considered.

PHYSICAL POISON IN THE MOUTH

Decay originating in the teeth becomes a source of infection to all the food taken into the mouth and makes it less fit to pass on into the digestive organs than if the teeth were whole and healthy. Much of the air taken into the lungs passes through the mouth, so that when the respired air passes to and fro over the decaying portion, it becomes poison-laden and is carried into the lungs to exert its baleful influence upon the general health.

Don't let your mouth poison your whole system.

DEITCHE HOME'S DOUBLE TRAGEDY

SHORTLY AFTER 5 P. M. SUNDAY SHOCKED THE COMMUNITY.

MOTHER AND GIRL BURNED

To Death on South High Street Following An Attempt to Start Fire in a Stove With Kerosene.

The home of Julius Deitche, a Russian Jew junk peddler who shares with the family of W. Mirpolsky the double house at 512-514 South High street, was the scene of a horrible double tragedy shortly after five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Deitche was attempting to start a fire in a small stove located in a bedroom on the second floor. The firewood did not ignite readily and obnoxious fumes of kerosene began to fill the room. A possibility that some remnants of a previous fire might be smoldering in the layer of ashes and kerosene which lined the bottom of the heating apparatus, she attempted to apply kerosene. There was a flash of flame which smothered and blinded her and the next instant her clothes and those of the little daughter, Tina, just two years and three months old, were ablaze. The mother uttered one half-articulate scream of agony and attempted to grope her way to the stairs. She fell at the landing in the dark and narrow hallway and the flames consumed her garments and burned her body beyond recognition. The same awful fate overtook the little child. Both had been dead several minutes, though the flesh was still burning, when the fire department, responding to an alarm which was turned in at a box some distance away, arrived by a devious route, up on the second floor. Chief Corporal J. Murphy was the first to reach the stairway landing and stimulate the mother, supposing her to be still alive, he hurried below with the body in his arms. It was not until he reached the light that he learned that he carried only a corpse. Another fireman was quick to follow with the child and in order to extinguish the flames that were devouring the flesh it was necessary to roll both dead bodies in the snow. Strangely enough, the flames from the burning bodies were not communicated to the woodwork and did little or no damage to the house.

Husband Was Powerless.

Julius Deitche was with the other two children in a room on the ground floor and preparing one of them for a bath when he heard his wife scream. Whether he reached the landing too late or lost his presence of mind in the face of the catastrophe and ran for help when single-handed efforts might have proved availing, does not appear. He was caring for the two motherless children and weeping bitterly over his bereavement when the firemen first saw him.

Bodies Sent to Milwaukee.
Mrs. Deitche was twenty-seven years of age. Both she and her husband came to this country from Russia but a short time ago. Mr. Deitche has the bearing of an industrious and straightforward citizen and made a very good impression in municipal court on December 23—so much so that the prosecution against himself and W. Mirpolsky for peddling apples without a state license was practically dropped. The sympathy of the entire community will go out to him in this hour of terrible affliction. The remains of mother and child were shipped to Milwaukee this morning.

MRS. GRIFFIN MADE REPORT TO POLICE

Says Her Two Daughters Are Missing Again—Believe They Are Held as "White Slaves."

Mrs. Michael Griffin, greatly excited, appeared in the police station this morning, and made a vehement plea to the police to look up her two daughters, who she claims have been absent from home this time for the past seven days.

Although Mrs. Griffin is positive that she can name those who are responsible for her daughters' waywardness, she refuses to swear out a warrant for their arrest, or even have her daughters committed to a state institution. She states that she has searched the town thoroughly, telephoned to relatives in Chicago and expressed her intention of leaving this afternoon for Detroit and Rockford to continue the search.

Among other wild and incoherent assertions, the distracted mother blamed the recent burlesque show and "white slavers" as being responsible for her progenies' absence. Amid such a multitude of pleas and assertions, the police hardly knew which way to turn as Mrs. Griffin will not swear out warrants or have the state assume charge of the two girls.

ANOTHER STRIKE OF THE SNOW SHOVELERS

Fail to Enjoy Work and Ask and Receive Thirty Cents Per Hour.

Encouraged by their success in forcing the C. & N. W. Ry. to accede to their demand for twenty-six cents an hour, the "Waldorf-Astoria" men, the "snowshovelers" of Chicago employed by the road to shovel snow in the New Yorks this morning refused to go to work unless they were given thirty cents an hour. Even this prospect was powerless to keep a number of them at work and they left early this morning for their haunts on West Madison street.

It is impossible for the road to secure other men, so the demands of the strikers have been granted. About 175 of the men have decided to work until they can secure a "good strike," probably enough to keep them in a "barrel house" until next spring.

Install Officers: Florence Camp No. 6, St. W. will install the newly-elected officers at a meeting to be held this evening in their hall. Dancing and refreshments will follow the ceremonies, which all Woodmen with their wives and Royal Neighbors are invited to attend.

PERSONAL MENTION.

J. H. Scheller left today for Milwaukee, where he will attend a meeting of the directors of the Wisconsin Association of Optometrists.

Joseph S. Fishery of South Academy street has gone to Harvey, Ill., to take a position in a pattern shop there.

WAS BADLY INJURED IN FIGHT ON A CAR

Conductor and Passenger Came to Blows Saturday Night Over Violation of Rules of Company.

Alva Golst of Beloit, a former employee of the Rockford and Interurban railway, was badly beaten up in a fight with Conductor Moll late Saturday night while riding to Janesville on the interurban car which reaches this city at eleven o'clock.

Golst, when the conductor refused to allow his companion to drink from a bottle in his possession, seized the bottle and attempted to swallow some of the contents. This was against the rules of the company, a fact well known by the former employee, and when Moll remonstrated he showed fight. During the struggle, in which the conductor used a black jack freely, Golst reached for the bottle, evidently intending to use it as a weapon.

The opponent, however, wrenched it from him and struck him over the head, inflicting two long and deep gashes. During the remainder of the ride, the wounds bled freely and when Golst was brought to the police station, it was necessary to call in Dr. Eldon to dress his wounds.

In commenting on the fight, the Beloit man admitted that he had broken the company's rules but insisted that the conductor had used him too severely and that he had made no attempt to defend himself. It is thought that the matter will be settled without bringing the case into court.

BADLY PINCHED BY A LARGE ICE CHEST

John Brennan, Drayman, Seriously Injured in Attempting to Move Chest at Home of J. F. Yahn.

John Brennan, a drayman, who resides at 327 Lincoln street, was possibly fatally injured this morning in an accident which occurred shortly after seven o'clock in the home of J. F. Yahn, at his home, 432 Fifth avenue. Mr. Brennan, Mr. Yahn and John Chase were working to remove a large ice chest, which had formerly been used in Yahn Brothers' butcher shop, from the shed to be put on a sleigh and conveyed to the market of Glen. As they were moving one of the sides of the ice box, it fell over and pinned Mr. Brennan between it and a launch which had been stored there. The man suffered intense pain until released from his position. He was immediately taken into the Yahn home and a surgeon called. His chin was cut and a hernia in his side was broken. He suffered internal injuries which are quite serious, but which, it is thought, may not prove fatal. Just how badly his vital organs were hurt the physician was this morning unable to determine. Dr. Nuzum, who was called to attend the injured man, expects to move him to his home this afternoon.

PLEADED GUILTY TO COMPLAINT MADE

Two Men Confessed to Having Robbed Chicago Man Saturday Night.

David Regan and Frank Walker, both strangers in the city, although Walker has been working at the new Lewis Kallitng company's addition for a short time, were arrested Saturday night on a charge of robbing Peter McChae, a traveling man of Chicago, of an overcoat, watch and some money.

The alleged robbery occurred about half past six Saturday night in the rear of the St. Charles hotel where McChae was registered. The three men had been drinking together and from all accounts were intoxicated. After paying for several drinks, during which time it was seen that McChae had about ten dollars, the three went into a restaurant on Wall street where McChae ordered three oyster stews. These he professed to be unable to pay for.

After leaving the restaurant he remembers nothing but upon coming to in the hotel, found that his overcoat, watch and money were missing. The police were notified at once and soon found McChae's former companions, one of whom was his coat. They were unable to find either the watch or the money but yesterday Walker finally confessed that the watch was hidden in a small box at the residence of Mrs. Conroy on Pleasant street. After a long search the missing timepiece was located.

This morning the men were examined by the chief of police and District Attorney Fisher but were not taken up in court.

Sentenced This Afternoon.
When Walker and Regan found that the evidence against them was conclusive, they decided to plead guilty. Upon their plea, Judge Pfaff this afternoon sentenced them to pay a fine of $20 and costs with an alternative of twenty-five days in jail. Walker was unable to pay the fine and went to jail, while Regan secured the money and was released.

A Medicine That Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Gives Satisfactory Relief.

If you suffer from constipation in any form whatever, acute or chronic, we will guarantee to supply you medicine that we honestly believe will effect permanent relief if taken with regularity and according to directions for a reasonable length of time. Should the medicine fail to benefit you to your entire satisfaction we promise that it shall cost you nothing.

No other remedy can be compared with Rexall Orderlies for the easy, pleasant and successful treatment of constipation. The active medicinal ingredient of this remedy, which is entirely new discovery, combined with other valuable ingredients, it forms a perfect regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthening. Rexall Orderlies are on hand like candy, and are notable for their gentle and agreeable action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience, and may be taken at any time, day or night.

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children and for delicate or aged persons, because they do not contain anything injurious. Unlike other preparations, they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the habits acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics, and harsh physic, and remove the causes of constipation or irregular bowel action that are not of surgical variety.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. We know of nothing that will do you so much good. They are prepared in tablet form in two sizes: 36 tablets 25 cents, and 12 tablets 10 cents. WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"B" ANY-SAVING organizations have been springing up everywhere like the cockle shells in Mary Contrary's garden. Isn't it about time now that second childhood received some consideration?

I saw that query in a magazine the other day and heartily approved of it, only—before second childhood gets it all, I think—the middle-aged people.

Childhood and youth are always in the limelight because of their brightness and their romantic quality. And old age gets more or less into the limelight by reason of its infirmities. If in no other way, but the middle-aged folk—the people who are neither romantically old or romantically young—they seem to be perpetually cast for the parts of scene shifters or at best of chorus and superns.

And I think it's a shame, and a stinging reproach on the younger generation, to whose selfishness the eternal colorlessness of their elders' lives is usually due.

A woman came to see me the other day with some manuscript that she wanted me to look over.

She has written more or less in a small way for years, and I know that her literary attempts represent to her romance-loving heart the one element of personal romance in a life mostly devoted to her children, of whom she has two growing daughters.

"And what do Alice and Edna think of the article?" I asked as I handed the manuscript back to her.

A look of terror came into her eyes and her hands actually trembled as she reached for the papers.

"Oh, please, don't say anything about it to them," she pleaded. "They don't know anything about it. They don't approve of any writing. They think it is all nonsense anyone as old as I trying to write. You won't say anything to them, will you?"

Of course I reassured her, but I should have very much liked to have said something about it to them.

And the something would have been a vigorous expression of my opinion of their lack of sympathy with their mother's attempt to have a little life apart from theirs.

One day when I was at a suffrage meeting a woman told me of a neighbor who would like to come, but "doesn't dare to, because her daughter disapproves of it."

A young girl also said that her mother disapproved, but how little difference that made was evidenced by the fact that she was there.

The way the younger generation insists upon dominating the lives of the older people is positively wicked.

They expect perpetual sympathy and interest to be shown in all their projects and pleasures, but it apparently never occurs to them to repay in kind.

Because your father and mother are fifty or fifty-five or sixty does not mean that they have passed the age when they would enjoy being in the limelight of your interest occasionally instead of perpetually furnishing the limelight for you.

Did that ever occur to you, my young friends?

Gowns and wraps for the winter festivities are fashioned along simple lines, charming results being produced by the artistically draped effects. For the evening frock, delicate chiffons and silk nets conform admirably to this treatment, the appearance of elaboration being given when the drapings are held in place by garlands of flowers. By the same adornment a touch of color is sometimes added to a gown and delightful variety obtained. The dress is large and simple, and also holds developed in the same materials.

TWO SOUTH AMERICAN DIPUTATES AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Washington, D. C.—The home of the minister from Salvador, Mr. Mejia is to be one of the social centers this winter. Two of his charming daughters are just building into society and will make their first bow formally next week. The daughters are accomplished linguists, speaking French, Spanish with great fluency. Miss Paulita has shown a marked ability as an artist. They are popular with the younger members of the diplomatic corps and may frequently be seen driving their beautiful horses on Washington boulevards.

MRS. QUINN'S PHILOSOPHY BY SETTLEMENT VISITOR.

Mrs. Quinn was just taking a cup of tea when I dropped in to wish her a prosperous new year. She beamed all over her broad, comely face and her soft turn of the tongue was more apparent than usual as she held my hand and drew on all the salutations in the calendar to pour their choicest out for me.

"And what are you going to do that will count for your own blessing this coming year?" I asked.

"Do as it, ma'am? Sure there is not much a poor body can do, ma'am. I try to give a cheerful word, but that doesn't feed a hungry stomach, ma'am, and it's many the empty one in this part of the town this hard, cold winter."

"Surely," I said, "there are no hungry in this town. The charity—"

"Don't, ma'am! It's not the kind that can call upon the city for help that I am thinking about. There is a poor boy that's been on me heart this many a day. Prand he is, too. His mother died over a year ago, but he and his father stick together, and that is a thing ye don't often see, ma'am. The man he helpless centuries without the woman, and when the woman dies the man throws up his hands in a terrible fright and hurries out for help. Some kids get to the orphan's home and some get a bad step-mother, and that's hard and some 'ave the man take a house-keeper and that's the worst of all, ma'am, for we that look on know that there is no blessing on a home where the man will do that. But little Jim and his father kept house some way and we could to help the bit lad with the work. He was a mate by and tried to have every thing as the mother had kept it. The man worked as watchman and the little lad, he ain't but 12 now, ma'am, went to school. He sold papers, too, but not many, as he had to come home and make ready for his father."

"Well, ma'am, his sorrow that walks on the hearts of the poor, the week it rained all week. The man had been half sick and thin, but got down with the rheumatism. Little wages and little money laid by for the winter, ma'am, and it wasn't long till the bottom of the flour bag showed up and no money to fill it. The boy staid late with the papers, but he couldn't make much, and matters went from bad to worse. One day he came home and brought more money than ever before. He said he had found it, but the man said he had got a job out of hours. He brought home enough money to keep him from hungerin', but the father was worried. The lad acted queer. Instead of the cheery word it was a half look and nod as he went by. They live across the street, ma'am, and I used to see the man watchin' in by the windy will his face that would near break yer heart—but what was one to do."

"And the eldest thing, ma'am, was the juvenile court officer? The lad had been staidin' front vacant houses, ma'am. Pipe and brass and steel and sellin' the stuff to a junk dealer—may his bed be harrit! Forgive me, ma'am, but with I think of a man takin' a thief out of the sorrow and misery of a lad, lad like that. It makes me heart bitter bad. And now, ma'am, can't you help the lad?"

"I urged. And with her warm Irish heart shining through her tears we went to that place of terror to the ignorant—the juvenile court."

Had Valid Excuse.

Saying that he was 98, a man named Lacey, who was summoned at Norwich (England) for picking a flower in a public garden, pleaded absent-mindedness and the cause was dismissed.

A New Year's Fable.

On a certain New Year's morning the Wolf met the Hyena in the forest, and after observing that another year had passed and that old Father Time was marching right along, the Wolf remarked:

"This is the day when everybody should make a good resolve for the year."

"I have been having it in mind all the morning," was the reply.

"We could do better, and we ought to do it better."

"Right, you are."

"And I shall do better. Yes, I have already made my resolve. From this day forth I shall abstain from trees, and neither what I have been told to do, nor what I have been told to do."

"A splendid resolution," said the Hyena, "and let me congratulate you on making it. As for me, I have, after much consideration, resolved that I will eat no more of the present's hay."

"What? Hay? Hay? Let us now go and see if we cannot let the innocent sheep."

The man who resolves today not to mix his greens with his breakfast will get credit among his neighbors.

TO BE FIRST LADY OF CANADA—H. R. H. PRINCESS PATRICIA OF CONNAUGHT.

Montreal, Que.—For the first time in the history a prince of the blood will rule over a North American country, as if present plans carry, the Duke of Connaught, King Edward's brother, is to be the next governor general of Canada.

The formal acquiescence of the Canadian authorities is all that is necessary to make the appointment an accomplished fact.

Should Prince Patrick receive the appointment, his daughter, the Princess Patricia, one of the most popular and beautiful princesses of Europe, would accompany him to Canada and would rule over society in the new world as her aunt, the Princess Louise, did in the days when the Marquis of Lorne was governor general.

The suggestion of the Duke of Connaught's name as governor general to succeed Earl Grey, who will retire next year, has been met with great approval on both sides of the Atlantic. In England it is thought the appointment would serve still further to augment the Anglo-Canadian friendship which has shown to a marked degree in recent years.

In Canada, on the other hand, there is still the recollection of the days when Princess Louise, daughter of Queen Victoria and wife of the Marquis of Lorne, queen of the Marquis of Lorne, was the first lady of the land and spouse of the governor general.

The appointment of the son of Queen Victoria would be a recognition by the British government of the importance of Canada and as intimation that the northern strip of the American continent is not such a wild and uncivilized portion of the west that it is unsafe to send a member of the royal family there.

The installation of Prince Patrick as governor general at Ottawa will make that city the society center of the continent.

Called on "Mr. Anthem."

At an English school, once upon a time, when a concert was being held, the choir was on the program to sing an anthem, and their place was designated by the single word "Anthem." The gentleman who was master of ceremonies, a high-toned, pompous individual of the old school, when he came to that part of the program, announced, in a dignified way: "Mr. Anthem will now favor us."

Civil Service Reform.

Standard examinations for all positions of physicians in the classified service have been established by the civil service commission in Washington in place of the different standards set up by the various departments. The change is important in that it will enable an applicant by passing one examination to become eligible for appointment in any branch in which physicians are employed.

MANY WRITE FOR COMMISSION LAW

URGE VOTERS TO STUDY MATTER CAREFULLY BEFORE DE-CLINING BALLOT.

DIVERSITY OF OPINION

Some Law Opposition to the Proposed Change to Large Corporation Interests.

Instead of publishing the following communication under separate heads they are all grouped together with no preference to the different letters which appear below. Throughout the present campaign, in which the Gazette has espoused the cause of the adoption of the commission form of government for Janesville, the columns of the paper have been open to communications, pro and con, on the subject. Many have availed themselves of the opportunity to air their views on the matter and all communications received except those which were unsigned, have been published.

GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION.

By an Old Timer.
Oh, civic pride, in years gone by,
We dreamed of many changes made;
How we would swiftly grow beyond,
The village size of any grade.

How we would wing our flight across
The lapse of time, and take our stand.
The foremost, richest, grandest, best
The finest city in our land.

How we would be the leading mart,
Of all the cities of the West;
How far off lands would hear of us,
And seek our city as its best.

Oh, yes, we dreamed long, long ago,
So long the mind of man hath not Remembered much of what took place;
So long that we have most forgot.

Most five and sixty years have passed,
Since we began our youthful dream.
And now we wake to realize,
We drift alone upon the stream.

Yes, we have struggled through those years,
And kept our easy-going pace;
And neither strength nor wisdom gained.

Oh, stupid town, we stand alone;
No other city on this earth.
But moves along progressive lines
And gains a standing for its worth.

In heaven's name, what shall we do?
Stand still and hesitate to act?
Or shall we shake the shackles off
And not be fooled by any pact?

We have a chance to gain a point,
And take a mighty forward stride,
Adopt the new commission plan,
And thus redeem our civic pride.

Misleading voices now are heard,
Advising us against this law,
And all these voices do agree,
Their object is to find a flaw.

This sounds familiar, this advice,
For we have heard it of before;
It comes around at twilight tides,
With tones of mocky legal lore.

The twilight act, a simple farce,
Was played by five, in concert pitch,
Each harnessed pompously and loud,
And played his part without a hitch.

Such patriotic sacrifice
Is rarely made by legal lights,
Unless it's when they volunteer
To guard the people's sacred rights.

It's not so many moons ago,
That we forgot the volunteers,
But when the people found the law,
The volunteers just let them clear.

Since all those worthy legal men
Have used up all the words they can,
I'm more in favor of the law,
I mean the new commission plan.

"OLD TIMER."

Urge Men to Vote.

To the Editor:
Dear Sir: May I be permitted to have space enough in your columns to add my word of warning to the voters of the city, particularly the residents who have moved to Janesville from the rural districts, not to neglect to vote tomorrow for the commission
form of government.

The hue and cry has been made that this proposed government by commission means higher taxes, but try as I can, I find no reason for such a charge being made. Speaking to the former farmers who now make their homes in the city, I beg of them to consider carefully the arguments for and against the change before deciding.

You know the value of a dollar's worth of improvements as well as anyone, and if, as you must know, we are now receiving, only seventy cents worth of improvement is accomplished for the dollar you pay in taxes. It is time to try a new system.

Taxes will not be any higher, but we will receive a full dollar's worth for every dollar expended by the city.

The commission form of government has been successful wherever tried and the Wisconsin law is more carefully drawn up. It does not invite lawsuits as you would be taught to believe, but will simplify matters so that these will be avoided. Vote for it by all means.

"RETIRED FARMER."

To the Editor:
I am working for a large corporation that is much interested in the defeat of the commission law. Personally I favor it if for no other reason than the largest capitalists of the city oppose it. I am conversant with the manner in which ordinances have been legislated through the councils in past years, when valuable rights have been given away, and believe that under a commission form of government this would be impossible.

I believe in an honest administration of city affairs by honest men who are capable of handling the civic affairs. I believe firmly that the citizens of Janesville can be relied upon to elect such men and the fear that the wrong men might be chosen to manage the city is the weakest kind of an argument. It denotes the weakness of the cause in whose behalf it is put forth.

At a look of the voters is that they lack behind the scenes and discover who are the men who really oppose the law and what their interests are,
and why they think they can handle
the council better than a commission.
It is some selfish motive and the voters are to be the monkeys to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for the cats.

"LABOR."

Who Oppose Law?
To the Editor:
Why does not the Gazette publish the list of the men most prominently identified against the commission law and the reasons why they oppose the proposed change? I am sure it would be interesting reading and would open the eyes of many of the citizens to the real reasons they are so anxious to defeat it.

Of course it has been hinted at many times that the electric light company is violently opposed to the law and also that the railroads—both electric and steam—must have access to grid or their representatives would not be so anxious to find flaws in the law.

There must be a "Nigger in the woodpile" or the opposition would not be so anxious to defeat a law which to my mind put the government of the city in the hands of the people, not the corporations. Why not publish the names and reasons for their opposition shown, Mr. Editor?

TRUTH.
N. B. by Editor: There is no necessary to publish the names of the corporations or men opposed to the proposed law. This is not a personal campaign, but an attempt to show the people a good, honest and economical administration at the least cost in the shape of taxes. The interests of public service, corporations should not enter into the discussion.

Does Not Help

To the Editor:
I read with interest Mr. Hemingway's answer to Attorney Burpee's legal arguments which opposed the commission law. It was a clean cut analysis of the law and an untangled manner of the legal points that Mr.
Burpee was so skillfully against the law as a law. It was written in a scholarly manner and free from personal abuse.

What was my surprise and disgust at learning that the opposition to the law had seen fit to permit to be published a screed that attempted to blacken Mr. Hemingway personally, paying no attention to the legal points of the matter. They failed to answer one of Mr. Hemingway's arguments favoring the law, but attempted to blacken his interest as a citizen in seeing Janesville have a good stable
form of government.

Such tactics might be permissible in a campaign where Mr. Hemingway was a candidate for some office, but where he appears simply as a citizen and as such writes an interesting article that clarifies the situation, such an attack will make friends for Mr. Hemingway and friends for the cause he espouses unless I lost my guess.

The average American citizen likes fair play and certainly the opponents are lowering themselves to the level of the average ward-mandering politician, just what the commission law will do away with. Give the question a fair hearing, voters, and then vote as your conscience dictates, not as you are driven to.

"FAIR PLAY"

DYNAMITES HIMSELF; MAN BLOWN TO BITS

Monroe Man Takes Odd Method of Ending His Life.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Monroe, Wis., Jan. 10.—Thomas Trump, an employee of the city, fifty-eight years old, committed suicide here early Sunday morning "at his home," by blowing himself up with dynamite. Although his residence is a two-story structure, it was partially wrecked by the explosion, and other occupants, consisting of his wife, two children, a woman friend and her six month old baby, escaped.

When the undertakers called, they had difficulty in getting enough of Trump's remains together to warrant the use of a coffin.

Trump had been drinking, it is said, and it is further alleged he had indulged in frequent quarrels with his wife, when he was dispirited.

Last night he occupied a bedroom directly over that of Mrs. Trump.
About 2 o'clock in the morning his household was awakened by a terrible report, the smashing of window glass and the swaying of the house.

The explosive blew Trump into the floor of his room and down through the ceiling of Mrs. Trump's apartment. She was covered with an avalanche of plaster and splintered joists, but was not injured. The baby which was sleeping with Mrs. Trump, occupied with a black eye.

The others were on the opposite side of the house.
All that could be found of Trump was one leg, a part of his arms and his head.

About a week ago, Trump, who worked at a stone quarry, and was familiar with explosives, displayed a quantity of dynamite with fuse attached, saying he was going to kill himself with it, but his companions succeeded in getting it away from him.

The suicide had resided in Monroe for about twenty-five years.

Find Body.

The body of Edward Nordor, a blacksmith in the employ of Kulp-schmidt Bros., aged 28 years, was found under a trestle on the Milwaukee road two miles from the city on Sunday.
From indications he had fallen off the trestle and frozen to death.

PIONEER RESIDENT OF COUNTY IS DEAD

Charles Clifford, for Forty-five Years a Resident of Evansville, Has Passed Away.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Evansville, Jan. 7.—At his home in this city Thursday afternoon at fourfifteen o'clock, Charles M. Clifford passed to the great beyond after a week's illness of pneumonia. Mr. Clifford was one of the early settlers in this section and has lived in Evansville continuously for forty-five years.

He was born in Freedom, Maine, Dec.
10, 1834, and was one of a family of ten children. He came to Wisconsin fifty-five years ago and settled on a farm in the town of Magnolia. He was one of the strong pillars of the Methodist church, having been one of its leading members for more than forty years and was beloved and respected by a large circle of friends. For fifty years Mr. Clifford had been a member of the Masonic lodge and that order will have charge of the funeral services which will be held Sunday afternoon at two o'clock in the M. E. church. He is survived by his widow and four children: Mrs. Lew Van Wert, Miss Gladys Clifford, Frederick and Ray Clifford. He also leaves two daughters.

Utzig-Gillespie.

The marriage of Miss Cora Utzig to Arthur Gillespie of Evansville occurred yesterday afternoon at two o'clock at the home of the bride in the town of Magnolia. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. W. North in the presence of about thirty relatives and friends of the parties. Mr. Gillespie is employed by the Baker Manufacturing company and the couple will make their home in this city.

Coal Shortage.

Evansville householders have been facing a scarcity of coal for the past week, but the situation has been partially relieved for a few days by our coal merchants conferring three cars of coal yesterday which were billed to Madison. The supply is being partially met in small quantities to those most in need. So far as has been learned no one has actually suffered, for those who were lucky enough to have a supply on hand have shared with those who were less fortunate.
Unless another storm should interfere with railroad traffic, more will probably reach here in a few days.
Our coal dealers are doing all in their power to keep our people supplied with fuel and are in no way to blame for the present predicament, for they not only filled their store-houses during the early fall, but urged their customers to lay in a quantity sufficient for the winter's use.

Local News.

Notwithstanding that the thermometer registered 22 below at seven o'clock last evening there was a good attendance at the church party given by the Catholic society at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Tucker.
Frank Murphy captured first prize and Mrs. Chas. Spoor second.

Mrs. C. E. Gould is expected home today from a visit of two or three days to relatives in Whitewater.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bullard of Flint, Mich., have been passing a week or ten days here visiting his mother, Mrs.
Elmer Bullard and other relatives.

R. M. Richmond is spending a few days in Monroe on professional business.

The joint installation of the officers of the G. A. R. and W. R. C., which was to have been held last evening, was postponed until Thursday, Jan. 13, on account of the severe weather. The plan for last evening that of serving a picnic supper after installation, will be carried out at that meeting.

The two Baptist churches are planning to hold a series of revival meetings. An evangelist is expected here and the meetings will commence about the middle of January.

Will Olm, who for the past two weeks has been visiting relatives in Waukegan, Nebraska and Peoria, Ill., is expected home tomorrow.

RICE AND MILK.

Rice and milk make a good combination and a substantial meal upon which to satisfactorily sustain physical or mental work. Both digest in the same manner, chiefly in the intestine, without disharmony, and so easily that there is no unnecessary waste of vitality. The rice supplies ample heating and force food, the milk protein; nothing is wanting. As compared with the ordinary mixture, this is much more nutritious, avoids waste of vitality and general irritation that follows indiscriminate mixing. It should be eaten slowly, not boiled. A more economical meal, physiologically and financially, is hard to find, for workers or convalescent.

Aeroplane Telephones

EDITOR'S NOTICE—The special correspondent of The Gazette, Mr. Roy-mour, with his perfected alibi, has gone to Chicago to attend the great aviation meet of the ages. His description follows. Tonight he leaves for Niagara.

THE IRISH-AMERICAN
Chicago, Jan. 10.—The Irish-American made the trip last night, called on my wife, and here I am today ready to tell you about the biggest aviation meet I have ever seen. My little aeroplane ran into the poorer machine at Lexington and thirty-third street in "Chi" and but for the aid of my better half the gasoline tank would have been wrecked. Traveling through the air anywhere in the country is a precarious existence, but it is especially dangerous in Chicago.
When I had been dragged out from under the wreckage it was only to stumble into a snow drift of hills at the rear door of my home. An open confession is good for the creditor who has done you good, so in all honesty
I want to confess that inasmuch as I can never aspire to be a Morgan I have decided to go into the grocery business. Take it from me the Chicago delegation will all be living on Michigan avenue at the end of another year. But I digress. Here's for the nation wide aviation meet.

All contestants in this event began to soar more than a year ago. Every single one of them has been in the clouds ever since. Here is a brief list of the contestants:

No. 1. The "Boeing Special," a heavier than air craft, entered by the best trust. This machine has been hovering over every city in the land for months. The emblem emblazoned on the prow of the machine is a likeness of old boss, the family milk milk browling in a pasture full of clover, and revealing in contentment.

Tell by how hard that her lapins knows no bounds and her lapins of the other world so long as her children are in such demand.

No. 2. "The Golden Egg Flyer."
The machine is a lighter than air craft, entered by the combination of farmers and poultry raisers, who at this writing seem sure of the first prize, which is a life time lease on any apartment house or summer resort in the world. The "Flyer" carries a banner, with a view of the back yard of a country home on an early winter morning. The hens are picking corn out of the snow and singing a beautiful melody with the title line.
"We are a Jolly Bunch of Hens. We merely Peck and Peck; our lives are Safe. Our Homes Secure. No Chance to get it in the Neck."

No. 3. The "Parker Machine." This monoplane is also entered by the best trust. It was built in Chicago and several times has attained the dizzy heights in safety. On the side of the machine is the photograph of a man smiling broadly, wearing a bow tie and saying "You only feed me well because you want to take my hide."

There are a dozen other minor entries; that is they are minor because they are moving in such fast company.
A few of the others who are traveling the Philippine Path of Dalliance are "The Lander," the entry of the bread dealer. It is an aeroplane, but much smaller than the others. In other words it does not look like the same old loaf. "The Mercury," a milk de-aler's special, is not living up to its reputation. As the temperature drops this mercury rises and inversely, it is carrying an unusually large consignment of water for ballast. The "Winged Goat" is a pretty creation of the tailor that is flying up to expensive, fashionable clothing specials, coffee and tea sellers and delicate dainties in the form of dishes are clouding the sun.

Somehow the man who has entered his "Labor Marvel" in the meet is unable to make the blamed thing fly.

Moral—If you want to own a flying machine deal in necessities.

The tax roll of the Town of Johnstown is in my hands for collection and will take them in at my home the first Monday and Tuesday of every week during the month of January.

SOMETHING ABOUT TOOTH POWDER.

Do you wish to make a cheap tooth powder? If so, buy a pound of powdered chalk and a few cents worth of Indian perfume; mix this and you have about ten dollars worth of cheap tooth powder for 10c.

Don't pay 10c or 15c at the bargain counters for two cents worth of this same stuff.

A good tooth powder is a different proposition. Good materials cost money. It is necessary to grind and bolt through silk and expensive floral oils are used as perfume. This work can only be done with expensive machinery. Don't ever use a cheap tooth powder or paste. Powder stone scratches the enamel, and every scratch is a nail in the coffin of that tooth.

Fifty cents a year is all you spend for tooth powder if you buy the best.
One gold filling costs you two dollars.

Come in and talk with Mr. Phillips, one graduate pharmacist and chemist and learn something about tooth powder and liquids to clean the teeth

Fine Flower Preserved.

Flower lovers may be interested to learn that a flower from the first chrysanthemum ever grown in England may still be seen in the herbarium at the British museum. The plant, one of the small yellow flowered variety, was introduced into the Chelsea botanical gardens in 1764 by the famous horticulturist, Philip Miller, who himself preserved the specimen now in the museum. The new flower, however, failed to "catch on." After Miller's death its culture was neglected, and it is only within recent years that it has attained its present enormous popularity.

HOW TO SAVE THE NATION.

Acts 4:12. "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."

The most important word in the English language is salvation. The supreme question with every man, every city, every state and every nation is the question of the savior. "What must I do to be saved?"

What is Salvation?
Deliverance from the wrath of God. Yes, but deliverance from the wrath of God has little efficacy unless one is delivered also from the guilt of sin. Furthermore, one may be delivered from the wrath of God now, and from present guilt and yet not be saved. Sin of the future will cause a loss of the soul as surely as sin of the past. Therefore, in order to obtain salvation one must be delivered not only from the wrath of God and from the guilt of his sin, but also have dominion over sin. He who has experienced salvation has received a power not his own, a new life, a new nature by which he is enabled to overcome temptation and to live for the glory of God. That is why Jesus said to Nicodemus and to all the world, "Ye must be born again." Hence the importance of our text, "There is none other name."

The Christian is the Savior.
But I speak chiefly to people who bear that name. Because you bear the name of Christ you have really become the Savior. If sinners are saved it is and must be by and through the saved ones who bear the only "Name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." You, you must save the world. Remember the Gospel was originally intended for the world, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every nation." The nation as surely as the individual is to be saved from the wrath and the guilt and the power of sin by regeneration, "transformed by the renewing of the mind." And you must be its Savior.

How Redeemed from Cannibalism.

I have read that which back in the dim past, in the day which men seek not of now, man when he hungered fed on the flesh of his fellow men and found it sweet, and that even in those days there was one whose head was higher than his fellows and who thought, however, and as he picked the flesh from a human skull one day he pondered. And so it transpired one night when the men were gathered round the fire ready to eat that she stole away, and when they went to the tree where their victim was bound they found him gone, they cried to one another, "She, only she, has done this thing who has always said 'I like not the taste of man flesh; men are too like me!' She is mad. Let us kill her."

"Thus away back in those days" that we scarce believe in now, that woman died, but in the heads of certain men and women a new thought had taken root. They said, "We will not eat of her. There is something evil in the taste of human flesh." And ever after that when the flesh pots were filled with man flesh these stood aside. Then half the tribe ate human flesh and half not. Then as the years passed by none ate.

My friends, that is the way society grows better. Some one with an idea plants it in the furrows of sacrifice. Others see and learn and stand aside. Then more and more till a full grown reform is realized. It is easier for a man to do than to stand alone, but he who can stand alone can also, if need be, die.

My brother, have you the stuff in you out of which reforms are sprung? Are you one of those whose thought and standard are above those of your fellows? Can you stand aside while others gather around the flesh pots of ruin? Will you there take your stand and wait for the seed to take root and grow till half of America is in accord with your plan then all? If so, come with me and while all others gather about the flesh pots of ruin and ruin we will stand aside and vote for prohibition.

You and I Can Settle Saloon Problem.
If you will stand aside with me irreversibly and ever consistently on just three propositions, you and I will settle the saloon problem for America. You say this is an ad nauseam statement. Very well, all reforms are ad nauseam. Be it so; we who are here, you and I, can kill the liquor business; not today nor tomorrow, but some day when our thought has taken root in the mind and heart of the Christian citizenship of our land.

You say you hate the liquor traffic. You think it ought to die. Revolve or revenue, sidewalks or no sidewalks, business or no business, politics or no politics, the liquor traffic ought to die, and you would like to be the man to make it die. Very well, you may do that very thing. Just stand aside with me on these three propositions:

First, The nation is a divinely constituted organism with a personal character and a conscious moral obligation to be good.

Second, Our nation is a sinner, and only Christ can save it.

Third, Christ can save the nation only through the right attitude of saved men.
Here is a sinner with no knowledge or experience of religion. He does not know whether the Bible be true or not. You tell him that the salvation of Christ can make him good. What evidence has he? On what ground can he hope for salvation? How can faith begin in him unless he can see and know that the salvation of Christ has made other people good?

I tell you that the one hold of the Christian religion upon the world lies in the fact that it makes character. I offer no excuse for the silly fool that hides behind the meanness of hypocrisy he can find in the church, and as tries to excuse himself from the acceptance of Christ, but I demand an honest, candid confession of the responsibility of the Christian who bears Christ's name.

Saved by Attitude.

If you profess to be a Christian and the sinner knows that your attitude is wrong on any great question like the liquor question, in politics he has a right to doubt the efficacy of your religion to make man right. Christ cannot save that man until the doubt is removed. As a Christian your right attitude is the only means by which Christ can save an individual or the nation. And the supreme question for you is: What is the right attitude for the Christian citizen toward the drink, the traffic therein, and the nation's governmental partnership in the same. Unquestionably the right attitude of the Christian, the only attitude by which bearing the Christ-name you can save the nation is that of uncompromising prohibition. Brethren stand aside. Make your testimony clear. "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord." Stand aside! In business, in politics and at the ballot box register the testimony of your Christ-name for prohibition. That is the way to save the nation.

From the Servants' Table.

Van Antler—"I think we are sure of a good dinner to-night. You know my new English butler does the entire 'entering for the household.' Grubb—"Can you rely on him to—?" Van Antler—"Not always, but this evening I requested him to send us up something from the kitchen table."—Puck.

The Optimist's Corner

Daily Helps to Health and Happiness

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M. M. D.

Many of us are victims of prosperity and competition in business and society. We live at high pressure; letters and telegrams keep us constantly alert. Express trains or automobiles hurry us miles away from home in the morning and back again in the evening, and the pressure of competition is so great that few men think that they can afford to take their work easily, or to modify the constant strain of it by breaks of a day or two at a time. Add to this excess in eating and it is any wonder that your apprehension is no longer acute, your power of concentration diminished, and that you are peevish and irritable; that you are melancholy and troubled with sleeplessness or an abnormal tendency to drowsiness, that you are constipated and have a bad taste in the mouth in the morning and feel the need of stimulants to cheer and brace you up? Many people suffer from too much business or society and not enough health. When such is the case, they should cut out business and society for a time and come down to mush and milk and first principles. There is little escape for one who drugs himself into business or society. When the E string of your system is screwed up too tight you must bring the rest of the instrument down to a lower key or get out of the orchestra for a while. Take a rest and change. Get plenty of sleep; eat less; relax.

MANY REASONS FOR THE COMMISSION LAW

1. Because government by commission will give more value for every dollar spent.
2. Because the law provides that the commissioners may employ civil engineers or other experts when expert services are needed and only when needed.
3. Because the commission plan of government is a success in 40 other cities and because of the advertising Janeville would get if it took the lead, and because we need a change in government.
4. Because the commission plan of government is wanted by the voters, because 700 voters signed the petition calling for the election Jan. 11th to vote for the commission plan of government.
5. Because the law provides that three men selected by the people at large shall devote their entire time and energy to the affairs of the city.
6. Because the commission plan of government is free from politics and political wire pullers.
7. Because wherever commission form of government has been tried it has cured the evils of the former system of government.
8. Because the mayor or any one or two of the aldermen are powerless to carry on work of bettering conditions under the present system, which could and would be carried on by the commissioners.
9. Because greater benefits are to be derived than just the saving of money, such things as clean, energetic business administration of city affairs, booming and pushing of the town, increasing property values, a government free from politics, are of importance.
10. Because the commission plan of government is adapted to cities as small as 2,000 and as large as Boston.
11. Because the law has been carefully drawn by able men and is as perfect as any law can be, until it is put into effect and tested. If defects appear they can be remedied.
12. Because the law is conceived for the voter as against the politician.

The Island of Regeneration

By Cyrus Townsend Brady

CHAPTER XXII.

Unavailing Appeal.
She slept into the next morning. In the first place being upon the western side of the island, there was no flooding burst of sunlight through the open door to disturb her quiet slumber. In the second place she was so worn out and exhausted, she had had so little sleep in the past three days that imperative nature forced her into rest. She might have slept longer indeed, but that who was awakened by a great cry, a human voice calling her name. She opened her eyes and saw within the dimness of the cave a human figure, vaguely white in the darkness. For one fleeting instant she imagined that it might be he, but that hope was dispelled as quickly as it had been born. She recognized the voice. It was Langford's.

"Kate," he said, approaching her more nearly and bending over her, "are you alive then?"

He reached down and touched her hand where it lay across the turn leaves on her breast. His touch summoned her bewildered faculties to action. Brushing his hand aside, she sat up.

"It is I," she said.

"You are alive and well?"

"Yes," she answered.

"Thank God!" cried the man. "We thought you dead. We searched the island. Where had you hidden? Why have you done it?"

She rose slowly to her feet and confronted him.

"You!" she said bitterly. "Why have you come back?"

"I don't know," answered Langford. "I can't tell what moved me. I was here on the island with the others. I searched with the rest. I know that to foot of it was left unvisited. Every crack and crevice, every thicket and cypress, every tree, every cave and rift in the rocks was examined over and over again. We knew that you were gone and yet I could not believe it. Yesterday afternoon I parted from the cruiser. I did not bear away from this island until it was too dark and they were too far away to see what I would be about, and then I came back here at full speed."

"Why did you come?"

"I don't know. I was not satisfied. It seemed to me that I must come back and search again. I could not believe it possible that you were dead, really dead. Something in my heart, at my rate, brought me back once more to see the place where you had lived if no more than that. We made the island early in the morning. The yacht lies yonder. I came ashore a moment since and some kind Providence led me first of all to this spot. I entered the cave. I saw you lying there in the cool darkness. I thought you dead at first. Then I cried to you and you moved. And then I touched your hand. O Kate, thank God I have found you!"

"Where is he?" said the woman.

"Why didn't he come back?"

It was a cruel thing to say, but she could no more have helped it than she could have helped her breathing. Not to have said it would have killed her, for if Langford's love could turn him back, what should be said then of Charneck's. Langford was pale and haggard. He, too, had suffered. He was paying for his sins. He was expiating them and feeling it, although the expiation was not helping her.

"What of him?" she asked insistently.

"He is dead," said the man.

"Dead?" she asked.

"Yes," he said.

"And didn't you when you searched for me during those three years?"

"No," answered Langford. "I had a confident hope that somewhere you were alive."

"And will he not have that hope, too?"

"I cannot believe it."

There was a long, frightful pause. The woman sighed deeply.

"It may be as you say. It may be that we are separated forever. It may be that I shall never look upon him again, nor he upon me, but that makes no difference. I do not love you. I cannot love you. If he is dead, I shall love his memory until I meet him, if so be I may be found worthy of that, and I will keep myself for him. No other man shall have what belongs to him."

They had stepped nearer the entrance of the cave, which was a spacious one, as they spoke. The beauty of the woman in that soft light was so intense that it cast over Langford a spell. He heard the sound of her voice, but did not heed what she said. Suddenly he caught her in his arms.

"Kate," he cried, "we are alone here and I am master. That is my ship."

"What matters about him?" he said bitterly. "He had his chance. He failed to grasp it. He's gone."

The man did not tell her that Charneck had been carried away a senseless log, moved, or feel, by the shock of her departure.

"Once," said the woman, "you had your chance in the cabin of that very yacht out yonder, and you failed to grasp it and we separated."

"Yes," said the man. "I know that. I realize that now, and I came back. I have come back to take my chance again."

"And so he may come back," said the woman. "You sank lower than he."

"And I rose higher the other day upon the sand."

"You did, but not high enough. I believe in him. He will realize it, too."

She went on, all the confidence of her hopes springing into life again and giving force and power to her voice and bearing.

"And you condemn me for that one mistake?" said the man.

"No," returned the woman, "neither will I condemn him for that one mistake."

"But he's gone, I tell you."

"And he will come back, I know."

"He thinks you dead."

"So did you."

"But I came back, not he."

"You were your own master," said the woman swiftly. "You could go where you pleased. He was subject to the decision of others. I trust him still."

"And you don't trust me?"

"I trust you enough, but I don't love you."

"O Kate, think! There must be something in what I feel for you to move you. I did not know what it was. I did not realize it. I came back in the first place as much because I had been a blackguard and a coward and wanted to set myself right in your eyes as because I cared for you, but every hour of search made me know my own heart, and since I have seen you, since I see you now, there is nothing I would not do for you. There isn't any explanation or amendment or anything now, but because I am a man, and love you, I want you. I want to make you happy. And I am the one man in the world that ought to want you and want to make you happy. It is for that I have come back to you."

"How terrible are the arrangements of blind fate," said the woman. "You must believe what you say. You awaken my pity, my tenderness, my consideration, but these are all. I am not by to hear and therefore I lie by, for you deserve the truth, that just as you say you love me, nay, then, just as you do and more a thousand times, I love that man. It would be a crime, a sin, a bodily profanation, a mental and spiritual degradation to which the other—he knew to what she alluded as she paused—"were nothing. If I should come to you with my whole heart and soul given to the man, she threw her hand out in a great sweeping gesture, "yonder out at sea."

"But he doesn't love you."

"O yes, he does. Not as I would be loved, I admit, not as I please God, I shall be loved by him. He doesn't know; he doesn't understand. We don't know he will come to him and he will come back."

"It might be so," said the man. "I came back, but he believes you dead."

"And didn't you when you searched for me during those three years?"

"No," answered Langford. "I had a confident hope that somewhere you were alive."

"And will he not have that hope, too?"

"I cannot believe it."

There was a long, frightful pause. The woman sighed deeply.

"It may be as you say. It may be that we are separated forever. It may be that I shall never look upon him again, nor he upon me, but that makes no difference. I do not love you. I cannot love you. If he is dead, I shall love his memory until I meet him, if so be I may be found worthy of that, and I will keep myself for him. No other man shall have what belongs to him."

They had stepped nearer the entrance of the cave, which was a spacious one, as they spoke. The beauty of the woman in that soft light was so intense that it cast over Langford a spell. He heard the sound of her voice, but did not heed what she said. Suddenly he caught her in his arms.

10 FIGHT FOR THEIR LIVES

GIANT ICE GORGE IMPERILS TWO FERRIES AND THEIR CREWS.

FACE DEATH FOUR HOURS

Property Damage of $75,000 Follows in Monster Avalanche's Wake—Vessels Are at Mercy of Mass with Wheels Paralyzed.

Mount Carmel, Ill., Jan. 10.—Sweeping unexpectedly down the Wabash river just before daylight a monster ice gorge jeopardized the lives of the crews of two ferry boats numbering ten men and for four hours their lives hung in the balance, as the wheels of the boats were completely useless.

Awake in Imminent Peril. With the first sound of the breaking gorge and its immediate and terrific onslaught, the crews awoke to the realization that their lives were in imminent peril.

The only hope was that the ferries might float ahead of the avalanche and be to safety before the pounding tons of ice wrecked the boats and sent the men to certain death in the ice-ridden frigid stream.

For four long hours, that seemed an eternity, the battle between humanity and the elements raged.

Down and down the stream the vessels plowed and plunged, side by side and almost close enough for the men on board to cry out their common wails of desperation.

Property Loss is $75,000.

After a trip of eight miles, that seemed like many times a score, the ferries won the victory. With a last spurt they forged ahead of the heavy gorge and hurried into a haven that made all the cold, freezing world around them seem a veritable paradise.

The gorge that placed the lives of the two crews in jeopardy for so many hours, though it lost the battle with the ferries, kept on its rampage.

Nothing seemed able to cope with it, and anything that stood in its wake had little chance to survive. It is estimated that $75,000 damage was done by the gorge.

BEARS TERRORIZE PASSENGERS.

Polar Bears Occupy Deck of Trans-Atlantic Steamer.

New York, Jan. 10.—Five polar bears were in their element on the ice-coated, sea-washed decks of the steamer Graf Waldersee during the liner's trip here from Hamburg. Passengers on the steamer were terrorized by fear that the bears would break out of the cages, which slid about the decks with every roll of the ship.

Association of Collegiate Alumnae Will Inquire Best Way to Improve Human Race.

New York, Jan. 10.—By an investigation of its own membership and their antecedents from three generations or more, the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, composed of more than 5,000 members, is about to test the law of heredity.

This was revealed at a meeting of the New York branch held in the home of Mrs. John H. Huddleston. The secretary, Miss Dora M. Davis, read a letter from Frances G. Davenport of Washington reminding the New York members that the annual meeting in Cincinnati recently had appointed a standing committee on eugenics to aid a national committee on eugenics organized some time ago to collect data to be used in the study of human heredity.

The national committee is said to be engaged in an earnest endeavor to determine scientifically on the best way to develop and improve the human race. David Starr Jordan is chairman of the committee.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF THEFT.

Government Investigator Is Jailed for Taking Wickersham Letter.

New York, Jan. 10.—Thomas P. Kelly, a special investigator for the interstate commerce commission, was arrested here and locked up in the Tombs charged with the theft of a letter written by George W. Wickersham, United States attorney general, to Henry A. Wise, United States district attorney, the same having been taken from Mr. Wise's office in the New York Federal building.

News of the arrest caused a sensation in the federal building, where Kelly was known as a protégé of Henry L. Stimson, special counsel for the government in the prosecution of the sugar cases and formerly United States district attorney.

It was on information furnished by Kelly to Stimson that the government prosecuted with success the New York Central, Rock Island, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Central Vermont, Western Transatlantic and other railroad and transit companies for giving rebates on sugar shipments in violation of the Hepburn law. The railroads on pleas of guilty were all fined heavily.

TO TREAT ZELAYA AS CULPRIT.

Mexico Will Accord Him Same Treatment as Other Foreigners.

Washington, Jan. 10.—Former President Zelaya of Nicaragua, if his extradition from Mexico is asked, will be treated in any other foreign citizen in the latter republic, existing treaties between Mexico and Nicaragua and the Mexican laws on the subject being taken into careful consideration. This was the declaration of Senator De la Barra, ambassador from Mexico to the United States, who arrived here on his return from his country.

Absolutely no change in the friendly feeling which existed between Mexico and the United States previous to the flight of President Zelaya from Nicaragua has taken place, according to Senator De la Barra. The two countries are as one, he asserted, in their desire to bring about, in the wisest possible manner, a resumption of peaceful conditions in the Central American republic.

COTTON TO REACH WAR PRICES.

Prominent Operator Says Spot Will Advance to 20 Cents a Pound.

New York, Jan. 10.—Spot cotton will reach 20 cents a pound within the next ten days, an unprecedented high mark with the exception of the civil war period, according to a prediction made by Frank B. Hayne, who for more than a decade has been one of the biggest factors in the cotton future markets of New Orleans and New York.

Facts and figures are used by Mr. Hayne in support of his bullish statement. The supply of raw cotton in existence, he declared, is not sufficient to meet the demands of the spinners this year.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 10.—The condition of Earl D. Wilson, the midshipman whose neck was broken during a football game on October 23 last, has decidedly improved. There is every indication that the spinal cord, which was badly compressed, is gradually resuming its functions, and there is now a much greater expectation of a complete cure.

DON'T FAIL TO VOTE.

Every taxpayer in the city is directly interested in the result of the election tomorrow.

If the commission form of government carries it means more for your money and a clean and wholesome business administration.

No voter can afford to be indifferent and shirk responsibility. Don't let the cold weather keep you at home, but turn out and vote.

If the measure fails to carry it will not be because they, the opposition, voted against it, but because we, its indifferent friends, failed to do our duty as citizens.

The 700 men who signed the petition should be on hand to a man, with 700 more equally interested, and then only half the taxpayers will be represented.

Nothing but lukewarmness on the part of men who should feel vitally interested, can possibly defeat the measure. No intelligent citizen can afford to say by his action, "I don't care."

An opportunity never before presented is now at hand to redeem the city and place its administration on a sound business basis.

Can you think of anything more desirable? It means better streets, better improvements, better morals and a general betterment of all conditions.

The men who are actively supporting the movement enjoy your confidence. You believe in their honesty and integrity and would not question their judgment on a business proposition.

They believe that the time is ripe to abandon the old system of city government, with its slipshod methods, and adopt the commission plan, so highly endorsed wherever it has been tried.

If you are willing to cast in you lot with them, don't stay at home tomorrow, but turn out and say by your vote, "We are with you for better government, and a better Janesville."

Every voter, whether a taxpayer or not, is a citizen interested in good government. The young men of the city should be glad of the opportunity to assume the responsibility of citizenship by casting their vote for better government.

Vote "yes" on the proposition and you will have occasion to congratulate yourself many times before the year closes. Whatever you do don't fail to vote.
